TREE FALLS IN ROLE OF FAMILY RELIEF

Kittling, Md., March 30.—Five persons, members of an entire family, were drowned yesterday when a tree to which they were clinging was uprooted and swept away by the flood waters of the Potomac river. Two of the bodies were recovered today.

Pittsburg, Pa., March 30.—A score of city blocks in the lower sections were inundated and sections for several miles upstream laid waste when both the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers meeting here to form the Ohio left their banks today in Pittsburgh's greatest flood in 10 years. No loss of life was reported.

Much damage was caused to steel mills located along the river banks. Tracks of both the Baltimore and Ohio and Pittsburgh and Lake Erie railroads were flooded in sections. Many families were forced to leave their homes.

The crest of the flood was reached at 1 o'clock today at 292 feet, seven feet above flood stage. A slow recession began at dusk.

Railroads following the courses of the various rivers were greatly affected. Baltimore and Ohio lines between Pittsburgh and Baltimore were under water at various points, and trains were re-routed over the Pennsylvania to Baltimore where they proceeded on their own lines.

Traffic was delayed for 24 hours over the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie line through the Monongahela valley and the flooding of the Pittsburgh Terminal tracks caused trains to be re-routed at McKeesport to the Baltimore and Ohio tracks and run into Pittsburgh Terminal of that road. A landslide occurred on the Monongahela division of the Pennsylvania but was cleared away within a few hours.

Thousands of basements in the affected areas were flooded and many industrial plants along the Monongahela and Allegheny rivers will be forced to suspend operations until damage wrought by the flood can be repaired. Rowboats and canoes were pressed into service to establish communication between flooded districts and to rescue marooned residents.

At McKeesport, where the Troughly river joins the Monongahela, several streets were under six feet of water.

COPS DO BATTLE TO SAVE BANDITS NABBED AT WORK

New York, March 30.—Three police men surprised four bandits today in the act of relieving 26 members of the White Doves' club, a Harlem social organization of money, watches and jewelry worth $50,000, and arrested the four men.

Then with night sticks they fought off the robbers' victims, who made a rush at the disarmed policemen.

The officers got their captives to the street after a lively scuffle.

GAMES OF CHANCE IN JUAREZ CARLO BANNED IN ORDER

El Paso, Texas, March 30.—The Mexican government has issued orders for the closing of the international bridges at 8 o'clock, unless gambling is stopped in Juarez, according to J. L. Perez, immigration chief of that city.

Germany Parades Her Own Scandal Of 'Bootleg' Flour

Former Premier of Saxony Sentenced for Selling Immunity to Grafters.

Berlin, March 30.—While rumors of graft fly about Washington, Germany has been having a graft expose that centers on "bootleg" flour.

Dr. Zeigler, former communist premier of Saxony, has just been sentenced to three years imprisonment for accepting gifts while in office. The gifts came from a man who wanted to buy immunity from arrest while he handled illegal flour operations on a large scale.

It was brought out at the trial that Zeigler had destroyed records which showed the guilt of the profiteer, and the leader who was hailed as "Saxony's strong man" last autumn began a prison sentence Sunday.

It will be recalled that Dr. Zeigler was Saxony premier last October when "red" riots swept the state and rumors of "red" civil war focused world interest on the Zeigler government.

IMMIGRATION LAW GETS LABOR'S O. K.

Proposed "Emergency Conscription" of Labor Branded Undesirable in Federation Report.

Washington, March 30.—Immigration legislation is rated first among nine "outstanding" desirable pending measures and the bill providing for the conscription of labor in a "national emergency" is described as the most "inimical" matter ever considered by congress in the report of the American Federation of Labor legislative committee, made public today.

The other eight measures approved in the order given them by the committee are:

Bills for settlement of railroad labor disputes, the child labor constitutional amendment, workmen's compensation in the District of Columbia, soldier bonus, adequate wages for District of Columbia school teachers, extension of vocational rehabilitation, reclassification of federal employees, adequate wages for postal employees.

Raps "Gentlemen's Agreement."

The Johnson immigration bill, the report said, was being "maliciously attacked" both by foreign countries and by "unfair and greedy" domestic corporations. Opposition of the federal council of churches to the abolition of the "gentlemen's agreement" with Japan by excluding "aliens ineligible for citizenship" has been protested by President Gamers of the federation, the report adds, and it

Truck Is Filled With Loot Taken By Negro Bandits

Capital Avenue Residents Mourn Loss of Violin Valued at $1,500.

Operating on a wholesale basis, two negro bandits Sunday night broke their truck in front of the residence of S. Fishman, of 445 Capitol avenue, loaded it with silks, furniture, clothing, trunks and everything else accessible, including a valuable violin, and drove leisurely on their way.

While a check on all the missing articles has not been made, it is estimated that the thieves obtained plunder valued at more than $5,000. The violin, said to be worth $1,500, is more than 200 years old, having been in possession of the Fishman family for generations.

The bandits were seen as they drove from the house, and police notified. Detectives Hunt and Ginn have been assigned to the case. The Fishmans did not know of the robbery until they returned home several hours afterward.

SENATE TO VOTE ON MELLON PROBE AT SESSION TODAY

McKellar Proposal To Determine Eligibility of Secretary To Hold Office To Be Pressed.

DAUGHERTY PROBES TO DECIDE COURSE

Senator Wheeler Desires To Sift Justice Affairs To Bottom, but Colleagues Seem Satisfied.

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.

Washington, March 30.—With a certain sentiment manifesting itself for curtailing investigations at the capitol, the senate will take action Monday which will have a bearing on the future course of senatorial probing.

First, a vote is scheduled to be taken on the resolution of Senator McKellar, of Tennessee, which asks an investigation of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon to determine whether he is interested in business in violation of the law forbidding such connections.

Second, the Brookhart committee investigating the department of justice will decide in executive session how much further it will carry its inquiry, in view of the retirement of the attorney general which was its primary object.

Wheeler Wants to Keep On.

Except for Senator Wheeler, of Montana, the department of justice committee is inclined to cut short this investigation. Daugherty, against whom the fire had been directed, is out. Senator Brookhart, chairman of the committee, says he thinks the probe should proceed only to the point where it reveals the condition that existed in the department, and then should turn the evidence over to the new attorney general for action.

Wheeler declared Sunday that he favored carrying the investigation through to the finish. Wheeler's avowed purpose is beginning the investigation was to oust Daugherty, and he first introduced a resolution calling for the attorney general's resignation, which he withdrew. He said Sunday, however, that he will exert his efforts toward completing the investigation, following all the leads that have been opened. In view of the sentiment among other members of the committee, he is expected to be defeated in this aim.

Senate to Vote on Mellon.

While the Brookhart committee is deciding on its future course, the senate will turn its attention to the newest drive on a cabinet officer. Senator McKellar, democrat, Tennessee, said Sunday that he expected his resolution asking for an investigation of Secretary Mellon's business connections would pass without any material opposition.

McKellar contends that Mellon is holding office illegally by retaining outside business interests while secretary of the treasury, which is in violation of section 243 of the revised statutes of the United States. He also asks an investigation of whether

William Gross May Die of Fractured Skull—Others To Recover.

Liverly, Ga., March 30.—(Special.) William "Bill" Gross has a fractured skull, broken jawbone and a brain concussion as a result of an auto accident here early today when an automobile he was driving left the road, snapped a telegraph pole in three pieces and turned over, pinning Gross and Luther Rinehart underneath. Grady Kellett, another occupant, thrown clear of wreckage, has minor bruises. Gross was rushed to a Rome hospital for an operation. He is not expected to recover.

He was one of northwest Georgia's best known amateur baseball players, playing last season with the Berryton Duroes. Rinehart is cut and bruised, but will recover, doctors state.

"Home Beautiful" Exhibition Draws 35,000 Atlantans

Success of Movement Shown by Immense Attendance at Three Houses Opening Day.

HOUSES TO BE OPEN EVERY DAY OF WEEK

While Vastly Different, Each Residence Is Excellent Example of What Home Ought To Be.

Complete success of the Home Beautiful exhibit was assured Sunday when approximately 35,000 citizens of Atlanta visited the three homes during the nine hours they were open, as guests of The Constitution and cooperating merchants.

The crowds at each house were so enormous that it was almost impossible for the individual who was stationed at the door of each house to count the people as they entered, and many were missed in the estimate.

At house No. 1, located in Morningside, 18,312 people were actually counted. At house No. 2, corner Jackson and Sixth streets, 11,067 Atlantans entered the house. House No. 3 showed an attendance of 5,504.

Favorable Comments.

It was interesting to hear the comments of the crowds which were remarkably favorable at each house. "How complete it is," one woman exclaimed at one house. "You would think they would have forgotten something, but evidently they have not; at least I can not think of a thing that is missing."

It was a curious thing when interviewing the governors Saturday morning to have them each maintain that his house was the best of the lot, but it was far more curious to hear the visitors who went from one house to another exclaim to each other, "this house is the best."

All Exceedingly Beautiful.

No matter in which order the houses were visited, it seemed to be the general opinion that the last one visited was by far the most attractive.

While vastly different each house is homelike, livable, and an excellent example of what a home should be. They bred in the visitors the desire to go straight home and try every possible way in which to brighten and beautify one's own home.

None of the little individual touches which make homes attractive were lacking in the exhibit. Fresh flowers in variegated vases, furnished by the West View Florists, decorated the

Lure of Sirens One Reason Why Men Leave Home, Claim

INCOMPATIBILITY ALSO BREAKS CUPIID'S BONDS

New York, March 30.—An attempt to answer the eternal question of "why men leave home," and other marital problems producing domestic discord, is made in the annual report of Leonard McGee, attorney-in-chief for the Legal Aid society. This organization, by giving expert counsel on the marital situation, aims to save men and women from domestic pitfalls.

"Why men leave home, deserting wives and children, is an open question," he said. "In some cases it is due to incompatibility or the lure of 'other women.' In the majority of instances, though, I think it is just plain cowardice on the part of the man. He either has a guilty conscience and cannot overcome the complaints of a neglected wife, or he is just plain mean and doesn't give a whoop whether the woman he promises to protect, lives or dies."

Last year in an effort to stem the tide of divorce and discontent, McGee issued his "ten commandments for wives," and the same for husbands, and followed them with a declaration that mothers-in-law and other "in-laws" were responsible for a great deal of the trouble.

Whether this advice was the reason or not, the legal aid records for 1923, compared with 1922, show a decrease in domestic difficulty cases of 873. In 1922, there were 3,895, and in 1923 only 2,922.

"I can't say whether this indicates

Ousted Cabinet Member Declares He Has No Personal Resentment Over Official Demise.

WILL STAY IN RACE FOR OHIO DELEGATE

Cool Heads Are Need of Times, Declares Former Attorney General in Stating His Feelings.

Atlantic City, March 30.—Harry M. Daugherty is still the "dependable friend and supporter" of President Coolidge, the ousted attorney general declared in a statement here Sunday night in which he emphasized he held no personal feelings against the president.

Daugherty declared he had no fears as to the future, did not wish to be considered a martyr and had no favors to ask, except the confidence of his friends and the public.

Daugherty's statement did not contain the sensations that had been expected after his intimation Saturday that he would reveal the "inside story" of recent happenings in Washington.

To Support Coolidge.

"No extended statement from me as to what has taken place and what it all meant may be expected for some time."

"It's usefulness would now be chiefly personal and that does not interest my friends or me. I was fully warned that it was to be done. I did not think it could take place in free America. It did, however, take place, though I did all I could to prevent it. I stood against it as a matter of duty and in saying this, I have no ambition to be considered a martyr."

"One thing now, let me say. I have no personal feeling against the president. I am yet his dependable friend and supporter."

"I have no fears as to my own contented future and I have no favors to ask, except the continuance of confidence on the part of my friends and the respect of the thinking, patriotic, self-respecting American people. Of all this, I feel confidently assured."

Full of Coolidge Praise.

Daugherty's statement was notable for its numerous complimentary allusions to Coolidge. These followed an intimation earlier in the day that he would support the president for the republican nomination, if successful in his candidacy for delegate-at-large from Ohio, and tended to dispel suggestions that the former justice chief might turn against Coolidge in the latter's candidacy.

"I took a difficult position with the president as a matter of duty and a desire to help him most in the long run," Daugherty said and declared, "we should all pull together to help the president."

"To give up a place in the cabinet

Rome, March 30.—Speeding up his program in an endeavor to beat the American flyers around the world, A. S. N. MacLaren, British aviator, planned to skip to Brindisi and make for Athens when he left this city Sunday, bound eastward.

The Italian port on the Adriatic had been on his original schedule, but having been delayed at Rome because of an accident to his plane the aviator decided to cut across the Italian boot, fly the Adriatic and cross the Greek mountains in one jump.

It is expected that he will land at the Greek army flying field near Tatoi, on the road to Marathon and only a few miles from Athens.

He made an early start here Sunday, quitting Rome at 5:30 a. m.

X-Ray May Prove Youth Fountain Of Spanish Fable

Sagging, Wrinkled Faces Bloom With Glow of 'Teens After Tests.

New York, March 30.—The discovery of a short road to youth beauty by way of the X-ray was announced today at Beth Israel hospital after experiments with a method recently disclosed by Dr. Oscar Levin, of this city.

The hospital surgeons warned, however, against the promiscuous use of the V-ray process because of the danger of burning or cancer infection.

Under the method the patient's face is exposed to direct V-rays from eight to 12 times in as many weeks. The greatest precautions are taken, the patient's scalp, ears, eyes and eyebrows being covered with lead foil and the chest and neck with heavy rubber.

The X-rays not only burn away any disease but are said to stimulate the facial nerves and the circulation of blood as to change the contour of the face. Wrinkles disappear, it is stated, and tissue is replaced with new of such vigor that expression as well as complexion becomes that of youth.

JOHN EAGAN DIES IN ASHEVILLE, N. C.

Body of Philanthropist Will Be Brought to Atlanta for Funeral Services Tuesday.

John J. Eagan, prominent Atlanta business man and philanthropist, died at 1:20 o'clock Sunday afternoon at his home in the Kenilworth section at Asheville, N. C. He went to Asheville with his wife and children four months ago in the hope of recovering his health.

With him when the end came were his wife and two small children, his mother, Mrs. M. V. Eagan; his sister, Mrs. Paul Brown; a cousin, Mrs. George O. Brown, all of Atlanta, and Marion Jackson, a close personal friend.

Although his illness had been considered serious for many weeks the critical stage had not been reached until the development of cerebral meningitis early last week, when all hope for his life was abandoned. He lapsed into unconsciousness Wednesday, and did not recover sufficiently to recognize members of his family.

His declining health forced him to give up active participation in his large Atlanta and Birmingham business interests nearly a year ago.

Announcement of Mr. Eagan's death was made at the regular Sunday service at the Central Presbyterian church, in which he was an elder and superintendent of the Sunday school.

ENGLAND, FRANCE GAVE SECRET AID TO BREAK SOVIET

American Relief Supplies for Russia's Starving Diverted To Help Counter-Revolt.

SCAIFE MADE REPORT TO JUSTICE OFFICE

Former Secret Service Agent Bares Veiled Anti-Soviet Activities in Special Interview.

BY E. B. McDONALD.

Washington, March 30.—The American relief administration in Russia, acting under orders from Herbert Hoover, now secretary of commerce, diverted supplies valued at $1,000,000 to the Kolchak counter-revolutionary forces during their campaign against the soviet government in 1919, Captain H. L. Scaife, former department of justice agent, charged in an interview Sunday night.

These supplies, consisting of a ship load of motor trucks, food, clothing and medicines, were delivered to General Yudenitch in Archangel, where American troops were stationed for some time after the signing of the armistice, Scaife said.

Carried in U. S. Ship.

The supplies were carried in a United States shipping board vessel in command of Captain James E. Martin, according to Scaife.

"I brought this matter to the attention of Attorney General Daugherty," Scaife said, "because I felt that this was one of the most corrupt situations I ever had encountered in all of my investigations. I learned of this after the present administration took office and inasmuch as the man who issued the irregular orders for the diversion of the supplies had since been made a member of the cabinet, I felt that they should be thoroughly gone over by the department of justice."

Other Nations Involved.

"During my investigation of this, I also stumbled onto documents which convinced me that both England and France, although they were not at war with Russia at the time, supported the Kolchak government with all of their powers. I know that Hoover was approached by representatives of both these governments who finally persuaded him to take the action he did concerning diversion of supplies meant for the suffering Russian people to the counter-revolutionaries."

"There was a whole boatload of supplies, consisting of automobile trucks, meant for the transportation of supplies in Russia, because of the broken-down railroads, food, clothing, medicines, surgical instruments and hospital supplies. The value of these supplies was conservatively estimated at $1,000,000 by the commander of the ship, Captain James E. Martin. A shipping board vessel was used."

Frame-Up on Martin, Claim.

"After the supplies had been delivered to General Yudenitch, Martin was discharged from the shipping board, for alleged wrongdoing under circumstances which plainly indicated a frame-up. Martin then brought suit against the board, charging conspiracy, and it was during the trial of this suit that I came upon the evidence which disclosed Hoover's action in Russia."

In briefs which Martin presented, he included the original order from Hoover instructing him to proceed to Archangel with the supplies and deliver them to General Yudenitch, or his representative. He also presented photostat copies of credentials issued to him by English and French officials, giving him safe conduct while in Archangel, and affidavits purporting to show that England and France backed the Kolchak government.

Martin finally won his suit, was exonerated of any wrongdoing, but refused to take service with the shipping board again."

Captain Scaife alluded to this affair.

fair in his testimony before the senate Daugherty investigating committee Saturday. He said he had made a report on the case to the department of justice on March 18, 1922, which contained a complete history of the case, with documents and photographs.

The American relief administration was organized in 1919 with Herbert Hoover as chairman, to administer a fund of $100,000,000 appropriated by congress for relief purposes. In addition it derived large funds from private contributions. It carried on operations in Russia and many of the stricken countries of Europe.

Washington, March 30.—Charles E. Hughes, former chief of the department of justice, declared today that the relief administration was a "complete bunk," the secretary declared late Sunday night.

He said the relief administration never had a dollar in motor trucks or gasoline and that it never had sent food to either General Yudenitch, stationed in Archangel, or Admiral Kolchak, in Siberia.

Haverty's Big New Store Opened to Public Today

With all details of preparation completed, the large new store of The Haverty Furniture company, corner of Edgewood avenue and 27th street, will be presented formally to the Atlanta public today, the opening to begin at 9 o'clock. Music furnished by Warner's Seven Aces, store decorations of cut flowers and statuary, and demonstrations of famous lines of merchandise will feature the occasion.

A large number of factory representatives will attend the opening of the store, including E. Hood, of the Englander company; George Klyn, of Hubbard, Elbridge & Miller company; well-known manufacturers of fine furniture, and J. C. Brown, who represents the George W. Clark company. Officials of the Haverty firm from stores located at Birmingham, Savannah, Memphis and Charleston also will attend. Among these will be S. R. Rustin, vice president and manager of the Haverty store of Savannah; Mr. Jones, of the Birmingham store; Mr. Russell, of the Memphis store; and Rudolph Rustin, of the Charleston store. Other prominent business men attending the opening will include Westcott Terhune, branch manager of the Columbia Graphophone company; Richard Schwab, of the Southern Spring Bed company; and K. Price, of the same company.

It is pointed out by Manager L. A. Witherspoon that the entire organization will be in readiness to president. In the selection of the merchandise, in the direction and expansion of the fine departments of the store, in the expression of the plan of the owners of the business, Mr. Witherspoon has succeeded admirably.

He came to Atlanta last September from Memphis, where he had served the firm for six years as manager in that city. He had placed the business there on a very substantial and successful basis when transferred to Atlanta to be the head of the new store here.

Opening Attracts Thousands. Great public interest has been expressed over the opening and it is expected that thousands will attend. As the visitor enters the doorway exquisite merchandise from the Ypsilanti, Malibu and Hubbard, Elbridge and Miller studios will attract the eye. Decorations of palms and beautiful cut flowers will flank the spacious aisles that intersect in front of the elevators to the five large floors.

Music furnished by Warner's Seven Aces, demonstrations of Kroehler sport beds, Englander couches, and day beds, the Haverty line of mattresses, Haverty's Blue Flame oil stoves with the new Lorain burner and an interesting congregate exhibit will feature the day.

Home lovers will find the eighteen display rooms on the second floor a point of unusual interest. Here will be seen furniture grouped in home settings, complete homes set in better grades of merchandise. The bedroom, dining room and rug departments will also be centers of marked interest.

J. J. Haverty, president and founder of this business, has seen his business grow from a tiny store to a huge one, as it were, that overlooks the furniture industry of this southland. He has seen his Atlanta store develop from a small business on East Hunter street forty years ago to the magnificent plant of today.

His stores have served the entire southeast in a constructive way, having furnished a million homes.

ENGLAND TO HAVE BEAUTIFUL SPRING, IS BET OF LLOYD'S

London, March 30.—Lloyd's are laying insurance at odds of three to one that the coming spring will be one of those beautiful seasons of nature which the poets tell about but which the foreigner in England rarely sees.

Lloyd's is doing a good business among shopkeepers and amusement park operators, insuring against a certain number of days of rain this spring.

In some cases they have placed money against rain on more than 20 per cent of the days of spring and summer, something seldom experienced on this moist island.

CUMBERLAND FLOODS END; DESTRUCTION RAIDED.
Cumberland, Md., March 30.—The flood waters of the Susquehanna and the Potomac rivers were retreating to their channels today leaving scenes of destruction in their wake.

Only one small section was under water in the city proper and the water was receding rapidly. Bridges and towns however, two towns on the West Virginia side of the Potomac, remained inundated, as was a wide area in the lower Potomac valley.

Great havoc was wrought by the flood but so far as could be learned no casualties resulted. Many miles of railroad track were washed away, two big steel bridges and a number of smaller structures were destroyed, while hundreds of buildings and houses were damaged and in some instances washed away.

SENATE TO VOTE ON MELLON PROBE

Mellon is still interested in the Overholt Distilling company, which would violate section 2168 of the revised statutes. Both of these provide for removal from office.

Mentioned in Other Probes.
McKellar, who recently demanded in the senate that Mellon resign, said Sunday that he has not decided whether he will proceed until the judiciary committee, which he has asked, make the investigation, concludes its work.

The resolution is specific, confining the probe only to a determination of whether Mellon is holding office in violation of these two statutes.

Mellon has been brought into the investigation now being made into the internal revenue bureau. He also was brought into the department of justice inquiry, when Gaston B. Means, former department of justice agent, testified that he had investigated the secretary upon order from President Harding, and that he "got the goods."

Charges Are Specified.
Because of the specific nature of McKellar's resolution, it is not apparent that the investigation could be carried into other subjects than those specified. The judiciary committee, however, has two progressive republicans in its ranks, Norris, of Nebraska, and Borah, of Idaho, who might aid the democrats on the committee in an effort to broaden the investigation, if evidence warranted. If Norris and Borah joined the democrats on the committee could be outvoted, 9 to 8.

"I have nothing personal against Secretary Mellon," McKellar said Sunday. "I merely want to find out whether he is holding his office in violation of the law, as appears from testimony which has been given before the sub-committee investigating the internal revenue bureau."

The committee investigating the department of justice will go on Tuesday with the testimony of Captain H. L. Saffell, who has told already of government overpayments of millions of dollars to aircraft companies. He may take two or three days longer with his testimony.

The oil committee will not meet again until Tuesday. At that time William Boyce Thompson, former chairman of the finance committee of the republican national committee, is scheduled to appear. He will be quizzed regarding the alleged gift of a block of stock by Harry F. Sinclair to wipe out the deficit in the campaign fund. Will H. Hays, former chairman of the republican national committee, has denied this report, stating that Sinclair's contribution was $75,000 in cash.

It is hoped that the influence that led to the church council into such a mistake will be exposed.

"It must not be forgotten that the 'gentlemen's agreement' is not a treaty," the report said. "No one has ever seen this gentlemen's agreement and it is believed to be on the same order as gentlemen's agreements between corporations for reduction of prices or for determining wages and the blacklisting of labor."

Conscription Rouses Ire.
As to the "proposed conscription measure," the report said the term "national emergency" covered "many possibilities and may come in peace as well as wartime." It added that the proposal to authorize the president to "stabilize prices of services and of all commodities" was a wage-fixing measure, adding that radio

"So far as the fixing of wages is concerned," the report continued, "the American Federation of Labor would agree to it if the same wages given labor would be paid to the members of the supreme court, of congress, the president and his cabinet and all other representatives of the government, in such cases."

COOLIDGE WEIGHS POST CANDIDATES

Washington, March 20. President Coolidge is expected to name a new attorney general to succeed Harry M. Daugherty during the next week.

While considerations of personal friendship have caused him to lean toward two prominent jurists, Arthur P. Rehn, chief justice of the Massachusetts supreme court for 18 years, and Harlan F. Stone, former dean of the Columbia University law school, much pressure has been brought to bear on the president for the appointment of a western progressive. Both Judge William S. Kenyon, of Iowa, and Senator Borah, of Idaho, have been suggested.

Has Progressive Support.

Although Kenyon declined the nomination, his friends here say he would accept the attorney generalship. Kenyon's wife has been in Washington during the winter under the care of a physician, and for this reason his friends say that Kenyon would not be able to leave the bench and accept the post.

Whether Kenyon will be offered the attorney generalship in view of his refusal of the post is not known. Many of those who are urging his appointment would like to see the place filled by Senator Borah, provided Kenyon is not named.

Riggs' Location Wrong.

The president is believed strongly toward Chief Justice Riggs, but it has been argued that his appointment would overlook the already large representation in the government from Massachusetts, and would draw fire from the western element.

Senator Pepper, of Pennsylvania, also has many supporters, and has recently come prominently to the fore in the councils of the president. Among others mentioned are James B. Reeb, solicitor general and now acting attorney general; Governor Grosvenor of Michigan; and Frank S. Biddle, of Idaho.

PARK PLAYGROUND OFFERS ARE MADE

deed permanently for play purposes. The interest of the foundation has been definitely limited to the acquisition of the land itself, as there are already in existence other organizations, either local or national, which can more properly be concerned with the problems of equipment and maintenance programs.

Organized in 1922.

Mr. Harmon's interest in play land extends over a considerable period of years and it is an interesting fact that the real estate subdivisions which he is now making a practice of acquiring and permanently setting aside one-tenth of every separate tract for recreation uses. During the past few years he has been active in the playground movement and has furthered this work by the Harmon Foundation, which was formally organized in 1922.

His gifts of play land, a community building and endowments have already amounted to nearly a quarter of a million.

Not more than $2,000 will be given for a playfield in a single locality; the land must not cost more than $1,000 and the minimum tract will be two acres of level and easily accessible land, convenient to all it proposes to serve. The land is to be used in perpetuity for playground and other recreational purposes, no buildings are to be erected on the property except such as will make for better play and sport standards.

All applications must be endorsed by the mayor or the president of the board of education, and contain a resolution by the proper officials to equip and properly maintain the playfield as an asset in the community. Formal application blanks, together with the detailed requirements will be furnished upon request. The specific details under which this offer is made will be strictly adhered to and writing will be useless unless these conditions can be complied with. As the necessary work of selection will involve a large amount of disinterested correspondence, if the experience of giving ten playgrounds in Ohio during 1923 is any criterion, it is earnestly requested by the foundation that organizations and individuals interested in the offer remember the physical limitations of the foundation and the specific requirements of the offer.

Communities wishing to make application for a playfield should first send for the formal application blank which provides for the careful appraisal of the land in question by two disinterested appraisers, evidence that an option has or can be secured for a sufficient length of time to consummate the purchase arrangements, and assurance that the title to the property is free and clear of all encumbrances or can be made so on or before taking title. Conveyance will preferably be made by deed to the foundation. Application forms and other information about the offer will be sent only upon written request to Harmon Foundation, Inc., 130 Nassau street, New York, N. Y. The closing date of the offer is July 1, 1924.

Based on Growth.

The selection of the recreation sites will be based upon the growth of the community and the corresponding necessity of setting aside play land at an early date in order to provide against future growth and the greater expense of securing land, the desirability of the location and the relative value of the property under consideration, and finally the degree of cooperation in improving and maintaining the field ascertained by the towns making application.

These playfields will be known in each locality as Harmon Fields. The foundation reserves the right to extend the offer if the need should arise to be very great, or on the other hand, reduce the number of fields to be selected if sufficient attractive opportunities are not presented from which to make an adequate choice. Due to the fact that not more than $1,000 an acre will be paid for land, necessarily a large number of valuable sites must be played over and will be eliminated from consideration. Recreation sites in such communities, it is the opinion of the foundation, should be secured directly by the town where the value has increased. The operations of the offer will be restricted to smaller growing towns and suburbs of larger cities where the limited funds at the disposal of the foundation will serve a larger number of communities and at the same time ultimately meet as great a need in the individual localities.

Foundation Organized.

The Harmon Foundation was organized under the laws of the state of New York in November, 1921. As a membership corporation it does not operate for gain, and whenever revenues are received such are used for the advancement of the various types of constructive work in which the foundation is interested. The organization is organized to further the application of business methods which will promote efficiency in educational and philanthropic work.

A fundamental principle behind all its efforts is the conviction that a gift of service is of more permanent benefit than a mere donation of dollars which requires no exertion on the part of the individual or group receiving the help. Except in the financing of practical and self-supporting programs, it is the purpose of the foundation to help in solving problems rather than make an immediate contribution which may later prove to be of temporary assistance only and thus add to the difficulties. The foundation seeks to stimulate self-help and reliance on one's own efforts rather than pauperize and create the edge of ambition by easy monetary aid.

At present there are two departments of work, the division of playgrounds and the division of students' loans. As rapidly as practicable the available funds will be used to cooperate in other forms of public service endeavor. The division of playgrounds is organized to help growing towns and cities in their efforts to secure centrally located and reasonably priced tracts of land that will be deemed permanently as recreation ground, no matter how large and commercial the community may become in future years. Eleven playgrounds were established in Ohio communities last year.

The division of student loans is engaged in a five-year experiment in granting loans on a business basis to selected students. During the past two years financial assistance has been given to 450 college students who are working their way in part at least toward a degree.

JOHN J. EAGAN TAKEN BY DEATH

Sunday passed resolutions deploring Mr. Eagan's death and recalling the great loss it means, not only to Atlanta but also to the entire country. The body, accompanied by relatives, will leave Asheville at 7 o'clock this morning for Atlanta. Funeral services will be held at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon from the Central Presbyterian church. Other arrangements to be announced later by H. M. Patterson & Son.

Sketch of Eagan.

Mr. Eagan was born in Griffin on April 22, 1870, moving here when a small boy, and made Atlanta his home.

JOHN J. EAGAN.

practically all his life. He was educated in the Atlanta public schools, and his delicate health prohibited his attendance at college.

When a young man, he was left a fortune by an uncle, William E. Russell, and soon became interested in philanthropic work. Practically his entire life had been devoted to church and religious work.

Although Mr. Eagan aided, both by financial contributions and personal efforts, in many worthy enterprises, he kept as much as possible in the background. His was a retiring nature, but he was conscientious to a degree, and could always be counted upon to assist in all civic endeavors.

When his country called during the world war, Mr. Eagan, without delay, first to respond, and he devoted three years to the service. His work taking him to all parts of the United States, and finally to Europe, he was having to do with the comfort of service men, their relatives and friends, and the communities in which they were located.

Finite Business Ideals.

Among his greatest works, while it does not directly concern Atlanta, was that of the American Cast Iron Pipe company, of Birmingham. The plant instituted and carried out by him there was at the time of its inauguration considered unique in industrial history. Mr. Eagan, looking always to the interests and betterment of others, conceived the idea of giving every employee a voice in the management and policies of the concern.

He was one of the founders of the American Cast Iron Pipe company fifteen years ago, and fostered its development from an insignificant institution to one of the greatest concerns of its kind in the entire world.

That remarkable growth was due largely to the work of Mr. Eagan. He was chairman of the board of directors, later vice-president, and for several years had served as president of the entire industry.

Mr. Eagan's desire during his entire business life was to translate, as far as possible, the spirit and teachings of Jesus Christ into his industrial relations.

The Birmingham plant is operated on a cooperative basis, giving all employees a real voice in the executive management, and giving them a representative on the board of directors. The entire common stock of the company has been placed in trust for the benefit of the employees, and is operated on the basis of first providing a living wage for every man, woman and child in any way connected with the plant, that wage to be determined by a committee of employees. After the living wage is assured, the original stockholders are paid a 6 per cent dividend, and all profits over that amount are divided equally between the management and the employees. One result of this plan has been the absence of any labor trouble, and the plant was kept even at a time when the entire country was shaken with labor controversies.

Made, F. M. C. A. Possible.

John J. Eagan, with Marion Jackson, a close friend and co-worker since boyhood, was largely responsible, through generous contributions and energetic personal efforts, for the new Atlanta Y. M. C. A. building, opened in August of 1914. Since that time he has assisted in various drives to raise funds to complete payments on the building which he made possible, and the amount outstanding now has been reduced from $75,000 to $30,000, with nearly completed payments to pay an additional $10,000 April 1, and to make the final payment in October of this year. Mr. Eagan had set his heart on seeing payments on the building completed.

He was a member of the International Y. M. C. A. committee, serving for many years in that capacity, and had been a member of the board of trustees of the Atlanta "Y" since its organization.

As chairman of the International Y. M. C. A. work, he was active in establishment of the negro Y. M. C. A. here and did many things for the betterment and uplift of the negro race. He served as chairman of the Southern Inter-Racial commission since its foundation in 1918, leading and directing the work of that body in the interests of improving and educating negroes.

Tireless in Church Work.

Mr. Eagan was an elder in the Central Presbyterian church, and served as superintendent of the Central Presbyterian Sunday school for more than 20 years. He was tireless in all forms of church work, and was very liberal in his support of the Central Presbyterian, of which he had been a member since boyhood.

Among his other religious works was the organization of the Christian Council of Atlanta, composed of representatives of all Protestant churches of the city. He had been chairman of the executive committee, also known as the church cooperative committee, in 1911, serving in that capacity for a long period, and several years ago consented to accept the presidency. The scope of his religious activities is shown by the fact that he was a member of the executive committee of the Federation of Churches of America, composed of all Protestant churches in the country, and operating along lines similar to those carried out by the Christian council in this city.

He was also a member of the executive committee of the Blue Ridge assembly, a camp located at Blue Ridge, N. C., which is owned and controlled by the Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., and other religious organizations, and at which educational, religious, and missionary conferences are held annually. Mr. Eagan was instrumental in its organization, and had been a leading figure in the successful work done by the assembly since.

Saved Martha Berry School.

Existence of the Martha Berry school at Rome is due probably only to the assistance given by Mr. Eagan. He became interested in the school 20 years ago, at which time it was simply a small, obscure Sunday school with few students. Mr. Eagan's help, coupled with the unswerving faith of Miss Martha Berry, today is responsible for a school that boasts more than 600 students. He had served on the board of trustees of the school during those 20 years and had made many large contributions.

Had Great War Record.

Mr. Eagan's greatest services to humanity were during the war. He gave three whole years, serving as vice chairman of the National War Camp Community service through 1917, 1918 and 1919. At that time, his headquarters were at Washington, but the work took him to all parts of the United States. The duties of the commission included welfare of soldiers and sailors in this country, care of cities in which military camps were located, and provision of entertainment for the service men. Raymond Fosdick, chairman of the board, was absent a large part of the time, and Mr. Eagan served as the head of the entire work during those periods. Marion Jackson was also a member of the board.

With Jackson, Mr. Eagan was largely instrumental in closing the so-called "red-light district" in Atlanta, and he was very active in any move pertaining to bettering general social conditions here.

Refused Public Offices.

He was many times urged to become a candidate for public offices, but invariably refused, preferring to carry on his work in his own quiet, unostentatious manner.

Mr. Eagan, a large property owner, set a precedent soon after the outbreak of the war in 1914 when he voluntarily reduced rent on practically all of his holdings here. In addition to that, he made rental on all of his property reasonable when rents throughout the country were soaring.

Five years ago, Mr. Eagan was married to Miss Susan Young, of Atlanta, and she, with her mother and two small children, William and Anne Eagan, and a sister, Mrs. Paul Brown, of Atlanta, are the only close relatives to survive him.

Dies At Residence.

Asheville, N. C., March 20. John Joseph Eagan, Atlanta capitalist and philanthropist, aged 54, who had been in Asheville for four months in the interest of his health, died at this home in the Kenilworth section this afternoon at 1:20 o'clock. His condition had been desperate for several days.

With him when he came were his wife and two children, his mother, Mrs. M. V. Eagan, his sister-in-law, Mrs. Paul Brown, and cousin, Mrs. George G. Brown, all of Atlanta, and other Atlanta friends.

The body, accompanied by the relatives, will leave Asheville Monday morning at 7 o'clock for Atlanta. The funeral services, it was stated, will be held there on Tuesday, probably everything having to do with the comfort of service men, their relatives and friends, and the communities in which they were located.

"I happened to be in a position where I could stand it better than some others. I hope it stops with me. The president's cabinet deserves support from congress and the country. He needs them and they are deserving of confidence, respect and gratitude."

"The complete story of this thing will wait," Daugherty continued. "The carrying out of a program of this kind upon and known to be helpful to the country will not wait too long."

"Nobody's feelings are much hurt if they are hurt at all. It doesn't amount to anything."

"Now is the time for cool heads and common sense, and help by all," Daugherty said he would return to Washington Monday afternoon.

STRIBLING AND McTIGUE CLASH IN NEWARK TONIGHT

Georgia Youngster Must Win by Knockout To Annex Light Heavyweight Title

EXTERMINATOR RUNS 4TH IN RACE

EDITOR'S NOTE.—Following is the second and last advance article by the noted sports writer, Westbrook Pegler, on the Stribling-McTigue light heavyweight championship bout tonight at Newark, N. J. In this article Pegler reviews the history of the title with interesting sidelights on McTigue and Stribling. Pegler will cover the fight tonight for The Constitution. Don't miss his story of it in Tuesday morning's Constitution.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

New York, March 30.—If Willie Stribling could cross the dope and Mike McTigue and his right fist all in one simultaneous sweep, the Stribling family will be able to roll in satins and limousines forever.

Willie, the school boy pugilist from Atlanta, Ga., fights McTigue in Newark, N. J., Monday night. The light heavyweight championship of the world. This never was much of a title and not regarded with very great interest now. But Willie Stribling, the school kid who could make the role a living one, resplendent with color and romance.

Old boxing terminology, the one who disappeared in a flash between the mid-weight and heavyweights, was the first champion of the light heavyweight division. He was a dull character. The only interesting thing about the old fighter was that he was always fighting twice, three times, perhaps four times a week. He never stopped many opponents but they didn't stop him to no decision he held the title that he had discovered if not in fact.

Carpenter Wins Title.—Then he went into the ring only to emerge for a brief flamboyant bargain with Georges Carpentier, who slapped him down in Jersey City in the autumn of 1920 as part of the prize arranged by the Carpentier-Dempsey fight. Tex Rickard thought Carpentier could really have some sort of world championship, so that the match with Dempsey would have maximum drawing powers. The title of light heavyweight champion meant nothing but it sounded like something.

Carpenter never really defended it. It was not at stake in the Dempsey fight at all. Afterward he met Ted Kid Lewis, a welterweight and an all men, two in London, but there was no danger of his being whipped by the anti-divine Ted Kid Lewis went out in less than a round.

Battling Siki held the title next, and the fact that with a wild, swinging, unskilled slugger could rise to the top of the light heavyweight class made the title seem cheaper than ever. Mike McTigue took it from Siki by a decision in Dublin. If McTigue had been able to stop the valuable black man he would have been acclaimed as an outstanding champion. But he didn't stop the batter and so McTigue is merely another mediocre holder of a title that has never amounted to much.

But the importance of a title depends on the man who holds it. There was no flyweight class to speak of until Jimmy Wilde and Lando Villa, picturesque characters both, came along to wear the honors in the regal manner. Now the flyweight division has recognized as a very definite class and its championship bouts are big events.

Stribling was born to the canvas of the circus and the ring. His father, a vaudeville performer, came to him as a "family act." When Willie and Terrie, his young brother, joined the family ensemble, they too were trained to be professional athletes and took part in the act. It was in this manner that Willie learned the rudiments of boxing. He and Terrie used to do boxing number as little boys on the three-day.

Strife Starts Fighting.—When Pa and Ma Stribling retired from pursuit of the railroad ties to settle down in Marion, Ga., and send their boys to school, Willie continued to box. He was the best in the county best in town and best in the county by turns. Then he began to fight obscure professionals. Last summer he "made" himself by fighting a draw with McTigue in Columbus, Ga.

To win the championship Willie will have to stop McTigue or capture the verdict by a foul.

It is almost an impossible job, for McTigue is a tall, almost almost, one but Dempsey, Fargo or Harry Wells for 12 rounds, having nothing to do but avoid punishment.

But if Willie does win he will be a more notable figure in the world of sport. And the fact that his mother and father and a tutor to him on all his travels will be with him, the fact that he will be a more notable figure in the world of sport.

Harry Lewis has been designated as the third man in the ring. In the semi-final bout, he will attempt to recover the prize lost in a recent defeat at London, which is matched with Harry Krohn, of Akron, Ohio.

New York Giants Leave Sarasota; Drivers Injured.—Havana, Cuba, March 30.—Fred Russum, driving a Cunningham racer, won the Havana Grand Prix race here Sunday. He was one of two drivers to finish out of a field of eleven starters.

EXTERMINATOR RUNS 4TH IN RACE

San Diego, Cal., March 30.—Rustler, California chestnut horse, owned by A. H. Spreckels, of San Francisco, today won the Cofferthorpe handicap at the Tijuana track of the Leslie Jockey club. Rustler, of the Leslie Jockey club, owned by John P. Miller, of Long Beach, Cal., was second.

Cherry Tree, owned by Byron Long of San Diego, was third, and Exterminator, owned by Willis Slattin-Kilmer, was fourth. Rustler won in one of the closest finishes ever seen at the course, three horses being on the wire.

Rustler's victory brought his owner $43,650. He took the lead at the start and held it throughout the distance of a mile and a quarter. The large field, 18 horses being entered, made the race difficult, but he soon had Rustler half a length in the lead. Sunnyland, from George P. Fuller's Bronx stable, made a determined bid for the first three-quarters to get in front, but having made that effort in vain, dropped far back.

Cherry Tree, brought home recently from New Orleans for the contest was away slow and was outpaced in the early running, but closed a huge gap from the stretch and finished last of all.

Old Exterminator, whose many victories had made him a favorite with the crowd, was sixth at the half, foundered up, and then took the lead in the last quarter, but was overtaken by Rustler in the last furlong and a half behind Cherry Tree.

The crowd was the largest in the history of the track, estimated at 20,000. It was estimated at more than 20,000. The $22 mutuels paid: Rustler $12.00 to win; $6 to place and $3.20 to show.

A PIECE FOR THE PAPER

By PAUL WARWICK.
Bippo and Bill, Armed to the Teeth, Will Fight It Out Today for Tech's Golfing Championship and the "Chip" Robert Trophy

For the sake of Bill Spalding and Bill Farnsworth, as well as for myself and others who are earnestly hoping to be in the gallery to watch the business—let us hope that the weather man doesn't allow the milk of human kindness to clabber, so that he can provide another joyous and sunny day on Monday, even as he did on Sunday. None lives so heartless and so immune to atmospheric influence not to be both exalted and exulted by the sweet and cheery aspect of the Sabbath. But back to Bill and Bippo—they're quite important this morning.

Bippo, you know, is captain of Georgia Tech's golfing team, is one of the chief and leading sports in the golfing renaissance which has recently taken place at the North Avenue school, and is a golfer of no mean ability. Bill, likewise, is prominent in Yellowjacket nubbik circles, playing a fine game and occupying a high position among Atlanta's young and coming linksmen. Their match, to go 18 holes over the Druid Hills course, should be an interesting affair and should draw a sizable gallery, especially of Tech lads who desire to view the conflict.

Bill went far last summer in the city championship, which was finally won by Ben Jones, "The Iron Man," and having seen Bill in action since that time we are of the opinion that a half-point box of candy would easily have won the city championship for him. He and Bippo both subsist on candy while smacking terrific pokes with the wood and performing delicate operations with the iron club. The winner of the match will have his name engraved on the trophy donated by "Chip" Robert, who always has been and always is doing something for his alma mater—Tech, to be sure.

We never notice the front door step, the third one from the top, until it gets terrible. Which is perfectly natural and, perfectly all right until along comes a day like Sunday, when one starts talking about it, stops, then starts again, from pure impulse. Its supreme qualities can be summed up in one short autobiographical excerpt—the writer saw forty-two automobiles pass him in two blocks as he walked alone on Peachtree and never once wished for one. The day, in person, was enough.

STRIKLING GETS HIS CHANCE.—This very night, up in Newark, a Georgia lad gets his opportunity to annex certain very high entitlements in the world of fisticuffing, when W. L. Strikling, Jr., enters the ring for a twelve-round embroglio with Mike McTigue, the Iberian holder of the light-heavyweight title. Mike's not much of a champion and his championship's not much of a championship—but it will mean a lot to W. L. if he grabs it. Which, by the rules, he will. Strikling is a New Jersey boy, a well-built, delivered knockout punch on the tough jaw or some other durable anatomical member of McTigue to win the bout. W. L. can win on a foul; but that is as unlikely as it would be unsatisfactory—should it happen.

About the best thing W. L.'s friends can reasonably hope for is a newspaper decision over the Irishman. Although he won't get his name engraved in the boxing gloves as would a champion, if he succeeds, it will mean a lot to him. Strikling's past doesn't quite justify the knockout blow, against one so shifty and careful as Mike. But you never can tell—as the burglar said when he shot the night watchman.

DARTMOUTH AND OGLETHORPE NINES WILL CLASH TODAY

BY BILL MORROW.—With the scalps of the Jackets taken in the two meetings with the Tech forces, Dartmouth will attempt to continue its winning streak of this state this afternoon, when the "Big Green" nine tests hitting and fielding abilities with the Oglethorpe Petrels on Hernando Field. The contest will start at 2 o'clock.

The Oglethorpe club faces a busy week of activities. After meeting Dartmouth this afternoon, the Petrels will be idle until Thursday afternoon when they will meet the "Big Green" again in a game at Petrel camp. Mercer will furnish the opposition on the two afternoons following the final Dartmouth-Oglethorpe clash. An error in the writer's story for Sunday stated that Furman would visit the Oglethorpe campus this week, this was incorrect as the Furman machine will open a two-game series here on Monday, April 7.

The Petrels are primed for this afternoon's meeting. Their solid showing against the Crakers has given them the needed confidence in fielding and hitting. Coach Anderson's recent shift in the line-up was made to increase the hitting strength of this clan.

THOMAS C. GALLOWAY DIES SUNDAY MORNING.—Thomas C. Galloway, well-known real estate man of Atlanta, died suddenly Sunday morning at his home, 275 Winn street. Decatur. He is survived by his widow, his daughter, Miss Lucia Galloway; his mother, Mrs. Charlotte M. Galloway; his brothers, Clarence D. Miles D. and Sam H. Galloway, of Atlanta, and his sister, Mrs. R. F. Gresham, of Mulberry, Fla.

Mr. Galloway was a native of Cartersville, but removed to Atlanta several years ago. He was for a time with a well-known mercantile house, after which he entered the real estate business. After conducting his own realty concern for several years he joined his brothers, Miles and Clarence, in the establishment of a firm known as Galloway Brothers, with offices in the Chandler building. His youngest brother, Sam H. Galloway, joined the firm within the past week.

The deceased was known to the musical world of the city, having been a member of the Galloway Brothers Quartet, an entertainment feature which became popular with the Atlanta people. This quartet was heard many times on The Constitution radio before its large station and equipment were donated to Georgia Tech.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later. P. J. Bloomfield, of the T. C. Bazemore Co., is the director in charge.

DATES MADE PUBLIC FOR MATCHES

New York, March 30.—Early in August, or perhaps in the latter part of July, the tennis racket will be swishing through the air in the first of the great international competition for the Davis cup.

Dates for the playing of the 1924 Davis cup ties in the American zone have been announced by the committee in charge of the championships. According to the committee's decision, the matches between Cuba and Canada, and Australia and China must be concluded no later than August 2. Nerves to this effect have been sent the nations concerned.

Japan is asked to meet the winner of the contest between Cuba and Canada, in the upper half of the draw, not later than August 9, and Mexico will play the survivor of the Australian-China tie on or before the same date. The final round of the American zone will be played on August 14, 15 and 16.

Arrangements for play among the seventeen nations in the European zone have been left to the International Lawn Tennis Federation. No dates have been fixed for the playing of the preliminary ties, but it has been stipulated that the winner in the European zone must arrive in this country in time to meet the winner of the American zone competition on September 4, 5 and 6.

The surviving match, which thus becomes the 1924 challenger, will be called upon to play the United States as the defender, at Philadelphia on September 11, 12 and 13.

Bears Defeated By Browns, 10-0

Mobile, Ala., March 30.—The Mobile Southern association team was badly beaten this afternoon by the St. Louis Browns 10-0. The majors scored eight runs in the first inning, driving Dan Boone, former Cleveland pitcher, off the mound. Adkins and Wiltsie, the other Mobile pitchers used against the Browns, were much better than Boone, Van Gilder and Kolp, for the Browns, held Mobile scoreless with two hits each being secured off them. George Sisler, of the Browns, up five times, secured three hits, two of them in one inning.

The Mobile and St. Louis teams will practice during the morning hours tomorrow on account of the Yankees and Rochester occupying the diamond in the afternoon with their first round exhibition game.

Ken Williams, leading home-run hitter of the team, is out with a bad right foot and will not be able to play for four or five days.

Niehoff Will Carry Squad To Rome To Play Buffalo Internationals There Today

BY HENRY ALLEN.—Stage fright or lack of condition by Pitcher Niehoff, whose rocky start gave Bert Niehoff's Crakers a substantial lead, blasted the hopes of 2,700 prisoners at the federal penitentiary for a win by their team over the professionals in a game staged at the prison yesterday afternoon. The final score was 11 to 4.

Doolan was a little wild with the first few batters and later as the Cracker artillerymen primed their batting eye the little right-hander was forced to give way in favor of Bishop, who worked for four innings.

But before the Crakers had been stepped in the first inning, seven men had crossed the rubber for counters, which was a lead substantial enough to allow them to take things easy for the rest of the afternoon.

But the prisoners still had plenty of fight and for the remainder of the game battled the Crakers on even terms.

Niehoff carried his entire squad to the prison yesterday and all of those that failed to participate in the game were sent through a good workout before hand. Twenty of substitutions were made by the Cracker boss.

Sheppard Pitches.—Sheppard, the elongated twirler from Tennessee, started on the mound for the Crakers and the youngster handled the situation very well with the help of Homer Haworth, who was doing the receiving. Bobby Tecarr, a big southpaw relief pitcher, took the last of the game and was touched rather lively in the closing frames.

The Crakers' big inning was the first. Zoellers and Krehmeyer, the first men up, walked and advanced to base on Katt's wild leave to first to catch Krehmeyer. Bill McCabe then lifted a long sacrifice fly to right and scored Zoellers. Paschal struck out, but Mueller doubled to left, scoring Krehmeyer. Smith and Niehoff followed filling the bases. Haworth was also passed forcing in run. Sheppard singled, scoring Niehoff and Mueller. Zoellers doubled scoring Sheppard.

After this the Feds managed to retire the side.

The Feds put over one run also in the first inning. Miller, the second man up, singled to right. Childers walked and Morgan singled to left, scoring Miller.

The Crakers pushed over another run in the fourth inning when Paschal singled and was advanced a base when

Puttng Greens Will Draw Lovers of Golf To Midway of Junior League Carnival

Mrs. Grady Black, left, and Mrs. Charles H. Black, Jr., members of the Atlanta Junior League, who are staging the big indoor carnival at the Auditorium Tuesday and Wednesday evening, are shown getting some private tips on the art of golfing from Bobby Jones, Atlanta's own national open champion, on top of the King Hardware company's roof, where a sporty little nine-hole course has just been installed.

There's something decidedly universal in the appeal of the Junior League Carnival, which gets under way at the auditorium tomorrow afternoon, to last two days—all for the benefit of charity and all staged by those fine young Atlanta women who compose the league.

Whatever the observer's age, whatever the observer's interests or inclinations—there will be something there to attract and to interest.

There's just one feature, in fact, which in Atlanta, where mashies are as familiar as tea cups and the word dormie is a household word, proves the universal allurements of the carnival. Referring to the putting green.

This putting green, in charge of prominent local golfers, will be one of the magnetic features of the midway. Here a man may prove to his wife that he was not exercising the golfer's broad conversational privilege when he told her he was death on twelve-foot putts. He can confirm, in part, at least, the birdie four he took on the long number nine.

Conversely—the putting green may react in favor of the wife.

But it will be there, and will draw the throngs. It is a well-planned affair, similar to those which have recently been installed on top of King Hardware company's roof, where any busy Atlantian may now grab off a few minutes at lunch time and practice the old putting touch—as well as iron out the quirks in a knotty swing with driver and refine the touch of his mashie niblick pitches.

The golf course at King's has already scored itself in the public popularity, for one may enjoy just about all the thrills there that golf has to offer—but for two days, at least, the Junior League girls are going to offer some competition.

And the fascination of the carnival does not stop there.

The fashion show, for instance, wherein will be displayed the latest imported creations, both hats and gowns, as introduced to Atlanta by Gary's and Muse's, respectively, will be a twice-daily (3 p. m. and 8 p. m.) means of enthralling the feminine element.

The vaudeville show, to be given twice daily at 4 and 9, will appeal to everybody, with the grace and talent of the pretty Atlanta girls and the gifted Atlanta boys who are its cast.

The booths and the sideshows and the attendant features of the midway will please the whole shooting match, for it's going to be a colorful and powerful scene that confronts us when we walk in upon it all.

There's no need to consider the men—they're fixed. For is it not a fact that the affair is being staged by the Junior League, in person? Sufficient.

Savannah, Ga., March 30.—(Special.)—Colonel George Harvey, former ambassador to Great Britain, whose daughter, Mrs. H. H. Thompson, narrowly escaped death when the Leeds party was shipwrecked at St. Simons Island Saturday, stopped in Savannah for several hours today, on his way to New York, and was entertained by Pleasant A. Stovall, former minister to Switzerland.

Mr. Harvey spoke of politics, declaring that Bora would be the ideal vice presidential candidate to run with Coolidge on the republican ticket, and that Robinson, of Arkansas, and Silzer, of New Jersey, would make a good democratic ticket.

Making the chief speech at the Hiemann society banquet March 17, more than a dozen years ago, Colonel Harvey proposed Woodrow Wilson for president. He said that it was Wilson's plan to have his presidential boom start in Savannah, where he first married.

Announces Their Annual

Pre-Inventory Sale

Truly Atlanta's Greatest Merchandising Event

For forty-two years we have been serving Atlanta and this wonderful Southland, and it is with a keen sense of gratitude and appreciation that we now announce the greatest sale in our history for our thousands of friends and customers.

Only once before in the history of this business has there been attempted a big sale. That was last year in April and it was called a Pre-Inventory Sale. We received so many favorable comments on the sale and so much encouragement from the thousands of our customers and friends that this year we are going to attempt another sale which, so far as we know, will eclipse anything in the merchandising annals of the South in our line.

Undoubtedly, it will in reality be Atlanta's greatest merchandising event. Values of such a nature that the prices will actually be startling. Purchasers will save many dollars. It is going to be an opportunity that none can afford to miss.

You will be more than pleased—Values will be far beyond your expectation.

Go to any of our stores. The same merchandise will be displayed and sold at all our twelve stores in this city.

A King sale is different. No cheap goods are ever bought in order to make a low price. We only have one grade of merchandise—THE BEST. Everything that is sold is guaranteed to give satisfaction. King's prices and quality are always uniform.

Reductions will come in every store and in every department, in some cases representing a saving of even more than 50%.

The sale starts tomorrow, Tuesday, April 1st, and runs for two weeks only, thru April 15th. Don't let anything interfere with your attending this,—the greatest merchandising event in our line in the history of Atlanta and the South.

Don't fail to see the Constitution Tuesday morning, April 1st.

Again we say, truly Atlanta's and the South's Greatest Sale by the South's Greatest Institution of its kind.

The Honorable Mr. Bing

BY HORATIO LANKFORD KING

Mr. Bing regarded the envelope in surprise. He was next reading the contents with greater surprise. Finding it, he exclaimed, aloud: "My word! That fellow again? My word!" and put the letter in his pocket. "Well," he ended in a burst of real anxiety: "I hope the fellow hasn't the nerve to come here!"

But he was not sure that the man would not have the audacity to call at the club. Considering the past reputation of the man, he was capable of doing most anything. Feeling more disturbed than ever, Mr. Bing left the club again as it to run away, and he earned this time was uncertainty itself. Occasionally he would look back to see if he was being followed. Surely he ought to be able to recognize that man even in the gloaming.

Four squares down the avenue he turned into a little second-hand book store where he browsed for awhile over dusty shelves. But he was really still thinking of that man who had written that letter, and wondering where he was—if by chance he was about to see him. He was also trying to decide what to do if he saw him. He supposed Sawyer had selected him because he knew that he (Mr. Bing) was mild and inoffensive in his ways and therefore easily imposed upon. That he shouldn't let Sawyer impose upon him. It was all right for him to be kind-hearted toward social outcasts, but some one's particularly of Sawyer's cooked head had a way of taking good advantage of good nature. Not did men like Sawyer ever really respect of their size? They merely humiliated and tried to deceive every body again, always for their own selfish purposes. Sawyer couldn't reform. So he must discourage the fellow if he thought he could come back to his old haunts and divert the friendship and sympathy of a tender-hearted man like himself. Indeed, Mr. Bing had begun to suspect that he was not hard-boiled enough for this new age of sham and smoothness in which he found himself in middle life. Other people had told him so, too. And he might have paid some attention to them if he had not earlier cultivated a prejudice against such strange expressions as "hard-boiled." It was an obvious term—more obvious than setting one's self to impose upon people who really might be hard-boiled.

He bought a musty copy of a flamboyant novel of early Victorian love-making, swashbuckling and reminiscence of knights and ladies, and started back for his club, the book under his arm. He leaned to such preposterous sentimental fancies because he never had a real romance of his own, and therefore knew no better. People thought he was a woman-hater, but he was not. He had never fallen in love or married because the responsibility of a wife and child, besides, he had never been able to afford marriage. However, the responsibility in some way was eliminated. That really was the curse of any bond—being in some way terribly, unalterably responsible. It was not being tied down, owned, labeled, that worried him, but just the responsibility. No, the romance in books seemed more real to him than did these modern affairs of actual life, full of socialism, free love and temperamental revolt. In love, one should really want to wear a ball and chain if the worry of making a living could be abolished—a living for two. Pathos or pathos—should always be the keynote of one's sentimental aberrations, if aberrations they were, or plain madness, he thought.

Back in the library of his beloved club he thought again of the astonishing letter in his pocket. It annoyed him more than ever. Finding that a new member had preempted his favorite chair, he grew even more mildly annoyed. Dismissing the writer of the letter from his thoughts for a few moments, he thought that even a new member should know that that was his chair, was understood by everybody that that was his chair. New members could make such dolting asses of themselves. He ought to put the chap to rights, only he would not except by a stare. He found himself another chair and got out the letter again. He frowned over it, thinking how both of Sawyer and the chap who had taken his chair. "If that fellow comes here and dares the nerve to come here, I'll tell him to get out!" he said to himself. "I won't listen to anything he has to say. I won't be made a goat of."

He hardly got the words out when he heard rather than saw the noisy entrance of Sawyer himself. The man tried to cover his furtiveness with an air of defiance which was not altogether a success. Perhaps he had hoped to escape attention by challenging it. Anyway, he burst in suddenly, rushing aside the startled negro doorman with a swipe of one of his thick, stubby arms, and seeing Mr. Bing, made straight for him, determined to reach him before anybody else could spring to the defense. He had never been a man of the right kind of pride, he would never have entered that club again. He would have stayed away the rest of his life. But Sawyer had no pride. And a gruff, powerful, ready-made sort of person he was, broad-shouldered, stocky and very valiantly put up for all his fine dress. The very kind of man to make the biggest fool of others imposed on him, though he would not hesitate to bowl as loud if people resented his imposing on them. He approached Mr. Bing with quick, short strides, his coat-tail flaring out behind him, a bulky, folded newspaper crammed in one of his pockets. He looked very aggressive to be on an errand of peace such as was now him.

Mr. Bing did not rise to return his greeting. It was impolite, but he kept his seat and tried to look displeased, outraged. Sawyer was hopeless sort, surely, never taking a hint. And the same old bull dog set to his pink paws—a wild man if there ever was one. A disgraced and dangerous one, too.

"Member me, don't you, Bing?" "Why—er—yes," stammered Mr. Bing.

"Fine! Don't forget your old friends, do you?" "My what?" ejaculated Mr. Bing unbelievably.

"Can't I sit down?" "Well—er—"

The red and pink faced man made a sound like a bark. Uninvited, he sprang himself in a chair beside his victim.

"This is the same damn hypocrite! Hark! Isn't it?" he asked and answered himself. "Oh, sure. The same modern hangout of the Forty Rich Thieves! This but wait a minute. Guess you got my letter, didn't you, Bing?"

"Yes."

"Got a stiff way of acknowledging receipt, haven't you? But that's all right. I know what the pride of snobs is. You fellows think you are better than other fellows. Well, what did you think of my proposition?"

"Proposition?" And Mr. Bing seemed to get his bearings for a moment. "Say, Mr. Sawyer. If we are snobs, why do you make such a cad of yourself as to come back to a place where snobs would greet you as snobs?"

"I came here to see you, not anybody else, Bing. I have no desire to ever be a member of this club again. The world's too big for me. I ask you, what do you think of my proposition?"

"I didn't make it all out, my dear Sawyer. Really. Why didn't you?"

"Plain enough. Wasn't it?"

"No. That is—"

"Look here, Bing! You haven't been smart enough to know when fortune's knocking at your stable door, do you? Get out of your paddock, you racer! Always asleep! Too proud to think, or turn a dollar! Now did I listen for Miss Fortune to knock, did you? And I always thought you a little better than the rest of this bunch. Come out of your shell, and talk!"

Yes, it was the same old Sawyer. Not changed a bit thought Mr. Bing. Just as boisterous and ill-mannered as ever were made. Otherwise, Mr. Bing would have been tempted to say something rather sharp himself. But right now he would deal temperately with the fellow, that way to avoid creating a sensation. What a vulgar fellow indeed!

"Well, my dear fellow," he answered in a low voice, "it just seemed to me like a bribe. And I cannot be bribed, you know. You just want to revenge yourself on some honorable members of this club. That is how I construed your letter."

"No, it wasn't, either, Bing. I'm not back in this town for revenge. But I thought you might see it that way, and miss the chance of your life to make some money. It's straight business, of course. I knew you would wonder why I would ask you for such a fat job, you being no practical business man, and maybe thinking less of me for offering you such a job, but kept his seat and tried to look displeased, outraged. Sawyer was hopeless sort, surely, never taking a hint. And the same old bull dog set to his pink paws—a wild man if there ever was one. A disgraced and dangerous one, too.

"Member me, don't you, Bing?" "Why—er—yes," stammered Mr. Bing.

THE GUMPS—HARK FROM THE TOMB

of some of your so-called friends—friends, y'understand, who wouldn't lend you a red cent. Not half as quick as I would! I came back here strictly on business. See that big car out there in the street? He went on pointing through one of the front windows. "It's mine! Ever time a new model comes in I buy one! I can afford to buy a new car any time I want to because I make money. I'm rich! I am making more money than I ever did before. I was making big money when I lived in this town. That's why some of these jealous snobs and pious hypocrites you call your friends had me thrown out of this club. They didn't like my wonderful abilities. They tried to make an outcast of me like they did the great Napoleon! But I am back from Elba, you see—stronger than ever! Ever' knock turned out to be a boost. Out in Texas I went in oil, and now I am worth millions! Think that over, Bing—millions. Now I'm buildin' factories of all kinds, promotin' industries of every description, and refusin' nobody's money who wants to get it, because, y'understand, it takes genius. I'm the genius of the firm, and the firm's me. Incidentally, I'm ready to get this old town alive again that boneheads have about planted a tombstone over! Bing, this town needs me!"

Pausing but a few seconds for all this to sink in, Mr. Sawyer started up again, more vain-gloriously:

"And now I'm on my feet again, a multi-millionaire, human-like, of course. I thought of old days and times I used to live here, and wrongs done me, and itched to hit back. I am a fighting man. Being a fighting man, I of course do my own fighting. So if I wanted to hit back at somebody in this town, who could I hit back at through you, Bing? I ask you the personal question because I am honest and don't want to use you as a cushion. Get that suspicion out of your mind. I said a while ago it wasn't just for sentiment I come to you and make this extraordinary offer, but it is, too. I just imagine you represent something that foolish people like to think is true about honest men—character, they call it. Anything Mr. Bing went into had to be all right. So I hope you understand me. And, also, that if I was itching for revenge on somebody, old enemies of mine like Bronson, I'd start higher up among the real giants. Sure I would, or I've lost my genius. I wouldn't be foolin' with minnows, would I, Bing?"

"And I am one of the minnows," asked Mr. Bing.

"Sure you are. That is, financially. But you shouldn't get sore at that. Truth hurts only the foolish. I fish for only whales. So I swear it was just a sentiment that made me think of you in this business. I know, too, though it may seem what is called paradoxical, that though you are inefficient when it comes to business affairs you can be on the other hand reliable. And that's more than these efficient people sometimes are. You are what I have heard say is a gentleman."

"Thanks," murmured Mr. Bing dryly. "And for the reliable. But wonder how you mean it?"

"Just what I said—and that you finances must be pretty low, Bing. Punk. Couldn't be worse, I bet. I know also there's a lot of people in this town who make fun of you and your back, and that's somethin' never did. There's that kind of hum man vermin all over the world. For myself, I tramp on 'em. But no you!"

"No," agreed Mr. Bing solemnly. "don't tramp on them. I do not seem to have the feet for it," and his smile had no malice in it. "Not necessary. But tread your pedal, Mr. Sawyer. I know you are not through."

When you get one you won't be satisfied until you have the whole family.

The boys and girls will find them the cutest things for play and the grown-ups will like them for the happy companions they are in home and office, to be used as inkwells, paperweights or ornaments.

Get in line right now for one of the pups by getting in on Today's Frolic on another page of The Constitution.

DUMBELL, JR., is the first of the Pups to go into Atlanta homes.

Each day all this week TEN MODELS OF DUMBELL, JR., will be given away. Think of it—TEN PUPS AS PRIZES EACH DAY!

The Ship Without a Rudder

Tossed helplessly about, the mere plaything of the winds and waves; it is only a question of time before the ship without a rudder crashes upon the rocks.

Without means of guidance a ship is useless—and the same thing is true of an individual.

The man who regularly reads the A-B-C Classified Section is not tossed helplessly about by this circumstance or that. He is not the mere plaything of chance. Instead, he steers the course of his affairs according to beacons of progress and arrives safely at the port of opportunity.

Guidance is the distinguishing virtue of the A-B-C Classified Section. There are both alphabetical and numerical guides through these columns—and each individual opportunity presented is a guide to personal progress.

Take a daily sail through these columns which guide you straight to Success!

1923 Federal Reserve Report Indicates Stability Record

The year 1923 was characterized by a large industrial output, practically full employment, a sustained consumers' demand for goods, and a level of prices more stable than in any year since 1915, according to the annual report of the federal reserve board made public today.

The report stated that "taking the year as a whole, and regarding it in the perspective of the after-war readjustment period, there is abundant evidence that, so far as the United States is concerned, economic readjustment has been proceeding at a rapid rate and is now nearing completion."

It was pointed out that although the economic balance as between various industries and sections of the country is not yet fully restored, during the past two years there has been rapid progress in the direction of a more stable equilibrium and of a better alignment of prices between different commodity groups.

Agriculture Advance

In agriculture, the report stated, there has been a general improvement, though in the wheat-growing and livestock industries the recovery has been slow and incomplete.

In the banking history of the year, the outstanding events were declared to be the large increase in the volume of credit and currency provided to meet the demands of the country's business, the considerable inflow of gold, and the continued use of a volume of reserve bank credit of over a billion dollars that changed little between the opening and closing of the year.

It was pointed out that "in support of the increased volume of production and trade, member banks of the federal reserve system, between the spring of 1922 and the end of 1923, extended an additional volume of credit of over $3,500,000,000. This represents an increase of about 14 per cent for the period and brought the total loans and investments of all member banks to a record level."

The ability of the banks of the country to finance credit requirements of an enlarged volume of business and to meet an increase in the demand for currency amounting to more than $300,000,000, without giving rise to a demand for additional federal reserve bank credit, was explained by the fact that member banks met this demand by the use of funds made available by the continued inflow of gold. This gold, it was stated, has served as a substitute for reserve bank credit.

The report added, however, that "the fact that a volume of federal reserve bank credit of about $1,200,000,000 has been continuously in use during the past two years indicates that, while the gold received from abroad has been sufficient to supply the demand for currency, the need of member banks, it has not been in such volume as to enable member banks to meet their total requirements without continuing to borrow from the federal reserve banks."

It was stated that total loans of all member banks increased by nearly $1,000,000,000 during the year, and that it was shown that the general demand for credit was for commercial, industrial and commercial purposes.

As to the trend of business activity during the past year, the report said: "Demand Credit Increase

"The period of most rapid increase in the demand for credit was the first quarter of the year when trade was active and the volume of production in basic industries reached the highest level on record."

"During the late spring and summer months, however, there was a recession in industrial activity, though the distribution of merchandise was well maintained."

"During the last quarter of the year, while the volume of production was below the record levels of the spring, trade continued active and prices showed a degree of stability in recent months."

Discount rates in 1923 underwent fewer changes than in any other year in the history of the system, it was reported. The only changes in discount rates were at the beginning of the year, when they were raised from 4 to 5 per cent, and at the end of February, when they were advanced from 5 to 6 per cent, and one-half per cent, bringing the rate at the close of the year to 6 per cent, not far from the level prevailing at all other reserve banks.

In the months immediately following the rate advance, the volume of credit continued to increase at a rapid rate, the report said. Prices ceased their rise in May, chiefly because the increased volume of production which the rise in prices had stimulated was reaching the market and taking effect in supplies of goods available for consumption.

While there was some recession in industrial activity in the second half of the year, during the closing months of 1923 prices became more stable, the reduced volume of production became better adjusted to the current demand, and the volume of commercial and agricultural borrowing declined slightly.

Economic Stability Shown

All these developments, it was pointed out, indicated that the year 1923, by comparison with previous years, attained a considerable degree of economic stability.

The outcome for the year shows that the banks of the country, through extension of credit, supported the industrial and trade recovery that was under way, and that the federal reserve banks, through the discount policy, performed the function laid down in the act of "accommodating business and commerce," according to the report.

The credit policy of the federal reserve system in 1923, it was stated, was expressed not only in its discount policy alone, but also in the operation of the operations of the federal reserve banks.

The report said: "The year has witnessed a considerable development in the scope, purpose and method of these open-market operations. The results of the year have demonstrated that open-market operations, when wisely timed and well conceived, are capable of giving effective support to the discount policy of federal reserve banks without an accompanying change of rates."

E. S. Imports Gold.
Pointing out that the net gold imports into the United States during the past year amounted to $240,000,000, the report stated that the movement which has been bringing gold to the United States during the past three years has probably not spent its force. The shifting of the world's principal monetary metal which has taken place in this period of time was reported to be without precedent in monetary history.

Since the federal reserve banks began operation in November, 1914, over $2,000,000,000 of gold have been added to the stock by importation, it was stated, pointing out that it is the gold that has thus been received from abroad that now constitutes the large portion of the gold reserves of the twelve federal reserve banks.

The gold reserves of the federal reserve system, which stood at $2,063,000,000 at the end of 1920, increased to $2,575,000,000 at the end of 1921, to $3,047,000,000 at the end of 1922, and to $3,080,000,000 at the end of 1923.

As to future gold movements, the report said: "In the event of the important effects of gold imports upon the American credit situation, and upon the international monetary situation, the probable extent and direction of future gold movements is a matter of great concern."

Foreign Reserves Invaded.
"No inflow comparable with that which has already taken place can be expected, since the movement has drained a large part of the European gold formerly in circulation and has, in addition, absorbed the bulk of the gold reserves of those countries."

"The United States now holds an aggregate of about $4,000,000,000 of gold, or approximately four-fifths of the estimated total stock of monetary gold in the world. It is more than double the total monetary stock of the United States before the beginning of the world war."

"The distribution of the distribution of gold in the past demonstrates that monetary gold, under normal conditions, distributes itself at a fairly steady rate in proportion to their ability to command it. It is to be expected that, when conditions are on a more normal basis, a situation similar to this will be reestablished."

"Great and impressive as has been the industrial growth of the United States during the past 10 years, it cannot be contended that the country has not given account of gold to insure the integrity and impenetrability of the gold standard."

"It is to be expected and desired that some portion of the gold which the times of disorganized trade have brought into the past ten years will eventually return to the countries whence it has come."

POLICE HUNT DRIVER OF CAR IN ACCIDENT

Search continued all day Sunday for the driver of a sedan who failed to stop Saturday night after his car had struck and probably fatally injured Miss Annie Lou Eskew, 16, of East Point, on Davis street, not far from her home.

H. E. Smith, of 72 Mayson avenue, whose machine answers the description of the car that figured in the accident, was brought to police headquarters Sunday, but was released, although he continued officers that he was not the man they sought.

The combined forces of Chief Joe Miller in East Point, Atlanta and Fulton county departments and Sheriff J. A. McCarty in DeKalb county are combing Fulton and DeKalb counties in their search for the driver. Acting Police Chief E. L. Jett Sunday night put the early apprehension of the right man.

Still unconscious at the Grady hospital with a fractured skull, Miss Eskew fought an uphill battle for her life throughout Sunday, and showed a slight improvement.

Miss Gertrude Fambrough, of 824 Piedmont avenue, and J. Russ, of 509
